

CHRIS MARRIOTT (C'28)

My name is Chris, and I am a junior continuing education student pursuing my bachelor's degree in theatre. Before coming to UD, I served in the U.S. Navy as a sonar technician aboard nuclear submarines, taking part in deployments and missions vital to national security. During my time at UD, I've found a community unlike any other. I've become deeply involved in the theatre program through several productions and have also enjoyed singing in the bass section of the concert choir. What I appreciate most about the University of Dubuque is the people. The faculty and staff genuinely invest in student success and model the kind of empathetic leadership I strive to embody.

As I continue this chapter, I hope to further the leadership skills I gained in the Navy and at UD while remaining open to where this path leads after graduation. I am grateful for those who invest in UD, because their support is felt immediately in the opportunities, programs, and experiences available to students. The success of this University is truly a team effort, and that spirit is what makes UD so special. It is a community of people with “many gifts” united in “one spirit” of continuing education and in the continuous improvement and strengthening of our shared bond as Spartans.

UNIVERSITY of DUBUQUE